“ Irds!!!! A flock of white birds came out of nowhere, formed a V, and flew off after the balloons. It was incredible. We could not have paid for what we witnessed. It definitely was God given, and that one little bird still was singing its little heart out. I just wanted to reach out to say, I am sorry, and don't be nervous, they will have everything done for you, and his service will be beautiful so relax. He is with your beautiful Mom now, and watch out for signs, especially right after you get home from his funeral. Take deep breaths and enjoy your Dads final send off. I will be thinking of you all.

“ Well leave it to me, the entire beginning of my paragraph disappeared! This is Debbie Dwyer, childhood friend. I saw your Dads picture and wanted to say how sorry I am. I remember your Mom and Dad as being so sweet and cute. Your Dad playing ball with the boys and your Mom always cooking up something good. The King Cake parties and the slumber parties, always a good time. I am sorry to hear of his passing. My daughter, Brandi Dwyer, passed on December 28th, her funeral was at LA Muhleisen & Son on January 16th. They were so sweet and caring, did everything we requested plus more. Kenan was our Funeral Director, so nice. Dont worry about anything! They will have everything done for you. We wanted to have a Dove release, but was told horror stories of what could go wrong so we decided to have a balloon release. When we went outside, there was one bird on a wire above, just singing its heart out. We released the balloons, they were so far up, someone screamed, Look at the Birds!! (now continue reading above, I'm sorry, I dont know what happened. See I'm still the old me, well yes really old now, but stupid stuff still happens)
