“ I was saddened to learn of Cary’s passing. He was an amazing person whom I was fortunate enough to call my friend.

I first met Cary while working in Cambridge at a print production company called Page Works. We quickly connected over our shared passion for fitness and creative design, which inspired us to work out together at a local gym nearby. At the time, I was mentoring Cary as his gym trainer, and we hit the gym almost everyday. I still remember how hard he pushed himself during every workout. He was truly inspiring and an incredible gym partner.

Unfortunately, we lost touch after he left Boston to pursue other goals, but I never forgot what a wonderful person he was. Many years later, we were able to reconnect one last time through email. He told me how saddened he was that he never had the chance to properly say goodbye to many of his close friends, including myself. Sadly, that was the last conversation we shared.

Cary was someone who constantly pushed boundaries through his love for art, music, and physical health, and that is something I will always admire about him. You will be deeply missed by all who were fortunate enough to have known you.

My heartfelt condolences go out to all of Cary’s loved ones and family members. May you find peace in heaven, and may your light never fade. Rest in peace, my dear friend.

“ A mutual friend told me of Cary's passing since he and I had lost touch over the years after he left Boston. I can't tell you how many fond memories he and I shared. We met at a pre-press job and became friends nearly instantly bonded by a shared passion for creating and learning. To say Cary was naturally brilliant is an understatement. Focused, clever, and always of good humor, we worked on several passion projects together pushing to see how far we could take it. One stands out of many. Cary wrote a wonderful story that I had the privilege of playing a character in along with my then girlfriend and my roommate. He decided to make a picture book out of it and we spent an afternoon shooting the scenes in a public park in costume. It was a crazy fun day and it came out beyond expectations, which I guess is no surprise since his creativity knew no bounds. However we'll all remember him most as a good friend during the times we spent camping, playing and seeing music, dinners and drinks out and about, laughing with friends well into the night, and all the shenanigans in-between. He presence was always joyous.

My condolences to his family and may he be at peace. If I know him, he's up there somewhere reimagining how to make where he's at even better. Our world lost a special one. Rest easy, my friend.
