“ I first met "Red" when he walked up to me like he had known me all of his life and he slipped Mardi Gras beads over my head. His smile filled my being with the warmth of happiness, sincerity, and comfort. The fact that I had never met him before was of no consequence to either of us then or anytime thereafter....we were freinds, From that day on, at every Trailblazer event I looked forward to a huge smile, warm hug and great freindship from Red. Until this last reunion in San Diego, I was not disaapointed.

I know I was not his best freind...but he sure made me fell like I was, and that is what mattered and what I will always remember.

I imissed him in San Diego last month, and I will miss him at every reunion I attend. I am blessed to have known him, and happy he was a part of my life. My father is welcoming him now with the same kind of warm smile, love and caring....they were alot alike...witty, fun loving. amd enjoying life. They both loved to make people smile and feel good. They both succeeded.

My prayers and condolences to his family and close friends...you were fortunate to have known him so well....Rest in Peace Dear Hero of Mine....symbolically putting beads over your head to take with you....

“ On behalf of the 70th Infantry Division Association, I extend condolences to the family of Red Freshno. Although Red trained as a mortar man in H Company, 276th Infantry Regiment at Camp Adair, Oregon, he was sent to fight in the Pacific. The 70th saw combat in France in the winter of 1944-1945. However, Red maintained close relationship with the men with whom he trained, attending multiple 70th reunions from coast to coast and even visiting the 70th battlefields in France twice. We will always remember his enthusiasm, loyalty, and kindness - along with the Mardi Gras beads which he would distribute at every reunion. In October, 2012, his name will be read in memoriam our at our biennial reunion in Kenner. Red was so excited that the reunion would be in "his backyard." He will be with us in spirit, I know. Special condolences are extended to family members Angel Alfonso, Sean Ducoing, and Debbie Ducoing who joined the Association and attended reunions with Red the past few years.

“ Red Freshno was a favorite at the reunions of his WWII veterans' outfit, the 70th Infantry Division Association. He was well known for his Mardi Gras beads that he always brought for the ladies and for his sense of humor. He once told me with such a sad look on his face that lately all the women he met would call him an SOB. I was outraged! Then he grinned and translated, "Sweet ole' boy." I was looking forward to seeing him at the upcoming reunion in New Orleans this fall.
