For Janette Ann Hebert

(July 20, 1940 - April 8, 2026)

In the quiet whispers of the morning light,
A name echoes softly, a soul burning bright.
Jan, with hands that held the world with grace,
A heart that could heal, no matter the place.
Through storms and shadows, she found her way,
A mother, a grandmother, who brightened each day.

She walked through sorrow, yet her smile stayed true,
A strength that carried her, and all she knew.
She buried her children, her heart split in two,
But she rose each time, with love that still grew.
Her arms were a refuge, her words like a balm,
In her presence, the world felt peaceful and calm.
A woman of kindness, of laughter and tears,
She held the family close through the passing years.
Her legacy lives on in the stories we share,
In the quiet moments, her spirit is there.
Janette Ann Hebert, your love still surrounds,
In the rustling leaves, in the softest of sounds.
Though you've left this world, your light never fades,
In the hearts of your family, your memory stays.
Rest in peace, dear Nanna, where the stars softly sing,
In the arms of the angels, you spread your wings.
