“ Grown men do cry and I was one. I was out of town and just recently found out.
The driver I looked forward to most to picking up parts at our warehouse was Marco.
Whenever he brought Scamp, you would here the collar tag rattling and Scamp would dash in the door and immediately jump on my lap. What was even funnier was when I brought my miniature dachshund , Sophia, and the two would run around the warehouse and playfully wrestle each other. Marco and I would laugh as to how they were just trying to impress each of us. Marco and I would talk for long periods of time from movies, to sports and of course the Saints. He even showed how proud he was of my son, who played for Tulane, and I greatly respected him for always showing his concern. Our dogs may be confused as to why they won't see each other, but they will forget about this. As for me, it is going to take some time. Why our Lord has taken someone like Marco, is just not understandable. But we just have to keep our faith, My prayers go out to family and all who have known Marco, and someday we will all see each other i n a much more beautiful place.
